Reaching for the Stars?
Join Us for an In-Depth Discussion About the Promise of Technology for People with Disabilities

April 7th-8th, 2003
Seattle, Washington

What: National Capacity Building Institute, “Technology and Transition: Empowering Students with Disabilities as They Transition to College and Careers”

When and Where: April 7th-8th, 2003, Claremont Hotel, Seattle Washington, prior to the Annual Conference of the Council for Exceptional Children

Who Should Attend: Secondary school and special educators, administrators and policy makers, secondary and postsecondary career guidance counselors, transition specialists, technology specialists, postsecondary education support personnel, rehabilitation counselors, individuals with disabilities, researchers and other persons interested in access to technology for individuals with disabilities

Invited Speakers: Sheryl Burgstahler, Disabilities, Opportunities, Internetworking, and Technology (DO-IT), University of Washington; Bob Stodden and Megan Conway, University of Hawaii; Chuck Hitchcock, CAST; Terry Thompson, DO-IT, University of Washington; Peg Lamb, NSF Bridges Transition Project, Michigan; Richard Luecking, TransCen Inc.; Microsoft Inc.; Panels of technology users and technology specialists

Agenda: Includes pre-Institute readings and online discussion, presentations by nationally recognized speakers, interactive discussion groups, and post-Institute follow-up

Apply online at: www.ncset.hawaii.edu

For more information or to apply by mail, please contact: Velina Sugiyama, NCSET, Center on Disability Studies, 1776 University Avenue, Honolulu, HI 96822, Tel: 808-956-5688, Email: velina@hawaii.edu

Sponsored by the National Center on Secondary Education and Transition (NCSET), University of Minnesota; the National Center for the Study of Postsecondary Educational Supports (NCSPES), University of Hawaii; and Disabilities, Opportunities, Internetworking, and Technology (DO-IT), University of Washington