Collaboration Between Secondary and Postsecondary Education
Promoting Success for Students with Disabilities

When: Monday, July 12th, 2004
Where: Fontainbleau Hilton Resort, Miami Beach
Cost: The Institute is free to participants.

Sponsored by the National Center for Secondary Education and Transition (NCSET), University of Minnesota and University of Hawaii at Manoa, the Association of Higher Education and Disability (AHEAD), and the Florida Transition Project

In collaboration with the Annual AHEAD Conference
Invited Speakers

Robert Stodden & Megan Conway, University of Hawaii; Stan Shaw, University of Connecticut; Sheryl Burgstahler, University of Washington; Rick Jeffries, Valencia Community College, Florida; Peg Lamb, Holt Public Schools, Michigan; and Kris Webb, University of Northern Florida. Also to include a student panel and a panel of programs that “bridge the gap”.

Topic

The Institute will explore issues related to the transition and postsecondary participation of youth with disabilities, with a focus on improving collaboration between secondary school and postsecondary school personnel and policies.

Who Should Attend

Postsecondary disability support services personnel; postsecondary faculty; secondary school educators; transition specialists; rehabilitation counselors; individuals with disabilities and their families; researchers, and other persons interested in educational opportunities for individuals with disabilities.

Agenda

Includes pre-Institute readings and online discussion, presentations by nationally recognized speakers, interactive discussion groups, and post-Institute follow-up.

Participants must be registered. To register online please go to the web at www.ncset.hawaii.edu. For more information or to register by mail please contact Velina Sugiyama, NCSET, Center on Disability Studies, 1776 University Avenue, UA 4-6, Honolulu, HI 96822. Tel: 808-956-5688. Fax: 808-956-7878. Email: velina@hawaii.edu.